Customer Care and Aftersales

GM Customer Care and Aftersales (CCA) markets automotive replacement parts worldwide for GM and non-GM vehicles through four distinct distribution channels, which include GM dealers, wholesale distributors, ACDelco warehouse distributors, and consumer-related outlets such as auto parts and general discount stores. CCA manages over 350,000 parts delivering to over 5,100 dealers, 168 DDG locations & 78 export countries. GM's Customer Care & Aftersales is the only business unit that supports the vehicle from cradle to grave.

Approximately 4,800 hourly and salaried employees work within GM North America CCA including 25 warehouse facilities, Central Office, Engineering and Technical Centers, and field sales regions within the United States, Canada and Mexico. CCA's headquarters is in Grand Blanc, Mich.

GM Retail channel provides GM & ACDelco parts and service retailing consulting to GM car and truck dealerships across North America.

GM Wholesale channel is a subset of GM Dealers that sell into the wholesale market with emphasis on collision and powertrain.

ACDelco channel sells and markets primarily to the independent aftermarket sales including all makes, with a broad base of service parts commonly replaced during the lifetime of a vehicle.

CCA's Service Operations is the organization responsible for supporting GM's NA dealer service business with training, service information and warranty assistance.

CCA's Global Service Engineering has responsibility for the service launch readiness of every GM vehicle launch globally.
